Costello asks EPA to reconsider Lead cleanup plan criticized

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello has asked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to reconsider its lead cleanup plan for the Granite City area.

Costello, a Belleville Democrat who has criticized the EPA for its handling of the NL Industries/Taracorp Superfund cleanup site and other Superfund sites, said a subcommittee hearing he arranged Tuesday confirmed his belief that the EPA should re-evaluate its options in cleaning up the Taracorp site.

"The testimony by health experts and others clearly indicates other options should be looked into (regarding the Taracorp cleanup plan)," Costello said after the hearing.

As a result of the hearing, Costello has requested the U.S. EPA to reopen its Record of Decision (ROD) and re-evaluate its cleanup option selection, he said.

Mayor Von Dee Cruse, Alderman Craig Tarpoff and Assistant City Attorney Sue

Bacon testified Tuesday in Washington, D.C., at the hearing before the Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee.

Dr. Renate Kimbrough, senior medical associate at the Institute for Evaluating Health Risks, based in Washington, also testified.

Lead processing was done at the Taracorp plant in Granite City for more than 80 years.

When the company declared bankruptcy in 1983, a large pile of lead waste was left behind at 15th and State streets.

Cruse and other officials have criticized the U.S. EPA for its proposed action, which includes removing the top six inches of soil — soil with lead concentration levels in excess of 500 parts per million — and adding it to the existing lead pile.

Soil would be removed from more than 600 yards in the city, transported to the existing lead pile and added to the pile. The EPA then would cap the pile with dirt and grass.

The proposed $35 million cleanup would take about seven years to complete.

In the time since the ROD was reached, an extensive, blood-lead study has been conducted in the city by the Illinois Department of Public Health and other agencies, but the U.S. EPA has thus far declined to incorporate those results and reconsider its record of decision.

Aid office here could be closed

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Public Aid office in Granite City would be closed and cases shifted to East Alton if Democratic budget cuts go through, state officials warned.

The Granite City office would be one of three to be closed if cuts expected from Senate Democrats this week become final, the Department of Public Aid announced Tuesday.

There are 58 Public Aid staffers in the Granite City office, which has about 14,480 welfare clients, Public Aid spokesman Carl Piepenburg said. He added that officials have not decided how many Granite City workers would be laid off or if some might be transferred to the East Alton office.

He also noted it was possible East Alton employees could be knocked out of their jobs because of seniority rights under the union contract.

The East Alton office employs 61 and serves 13,923 clients. If the Granite City office were eliminated, East Alton caseworkers would be responsible for all of the more than 28,000 county residents on welfare.

The department had already proposed closing 17 other district offices as part of the budget proposed by Gov. Jim Edgar in April.

Public Aid Director Phil Bradley also claimed the $31.9 million in additional cuts Senate Democrats are proposing would result in delaying benefits to clients (See OFFICE, Page 3A)

Younger, smaller teaching staff is foreseen

By Mike Chambers
Staff writer

Budget balancing and the maturing of its faculty will combine to create major changes in Granite City School District 9 over the next three years, Superintendent of Schools Gilbert "Gib" Walmsley said after Tuesday night's Board of Education meeting.

There will be a younger and smaller teaching staff.

Walmsley said that, by 1995, more than 100 district employees, including teachers and administrators, will have retired.

That figure makes up just over 16 percent of the total school staff.

Walmsley, who is leaving June 30 to become Moline school superintendent, said the Granite City district is cutting $1.2 million in its budget planning for the 1992-93 school year.

Some of those retiring are not being replaced, to aid in the cost cutting. And, "We might go from a teacher making $43,000 to a teacher making $23,000 a year. It's just a financial reality of life,"

Walmsley said. Currently, he said, the district is operating with a $600,000 deficit, which will be remedied by the scheduled cutbacks.

"Someplace (within the district) we are going to have less teachers. We're hopeful that we can put some teachers back in the fall (replace retirees), but we're not about to put back much," Walmsley said.

Under what he describes as a "worst-case scenario" forced by revenue decreases, the district plans to trim $359,000 in the elementary schools through such actions as replacing six retirees with less-experienced teachers, allowing four other positions to be lost to attrition, and granting one teacher an unpaid leave of absence.

The district also plans to cut $291,000 in junior high school and high school teacher salaries in a similar manner.

Many other short-term and long-range economies are planned, including smaller support staffs, insurance savings, bus route changes, and fee increases.

Marilyn Rongey, a fifth-grade teacher at Frohardt Elementary School, will not be allowed to change her mind and instead will retire at the end of this year.

Police arrest barricaded man

A 31-year-old Granite City man was arrested Monday afternoon, June 8, after allegedly brandishing a weapon and barricading himself in an apartment on State Street.

Frank P. Baker, of the 2500 block of State Street, was charged with aggravated assault, resisting arrest, disorderly conduct, criminal damage to property and unlawful possession of a weapon.

Witnesses at the scene told police Baker went into his upstairs apartment with a knife and what appeared to be a handgun following an alleged disturbance on the street an hour earlier. Two knives were allegedly confiscated from Baker at that time.

Erika L. Lindsay, 19, of State Street had been arrested at 2:20 p.m. and charged with disorderly conduct and criminal damage to a police vehicle in relation to the prior incident.

Officers arrived at the scene a second time at 3:30 p.m. and found Baker barricaded in his apartment. When backup officers arrived and secured the perimeter of the building, an attempt to get Baker to surrender peacefully was unsuccessful.

Officers entered the building, kicked in a door that was held closed by a couch, and found Baker smoking a cigarette at a kitchen table, with his hands under the table. Baker allegedly refused to show his hands.

K-9 officer Max helped apprehend Baker, and a search of the kitchen turned up five 12-gauge shotgun shells taped together with two cigarette lighters. The end of one shell had been burned, according to the police report.

A newspaper, rolled up to resemble a gun, was also taken from the scene, as well as an additional nine shotgun shells.

Lake's 'monster' is stinking pipe

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

There's a "monster" in Long Lake that has reared its ugly head and produced a foul odor that has Pontoon Beach residents up in arms.

The "monster" isn't any type of large beast, but a large sewer pipe which has been seen pitching and heaving about, above the water in the lake.

Sewer gas, which has been building up inside the pipe, causes the pipe to raise up and down. Unfortunately for residents, the gas is finding its way out through home vents.

"For the last three years, we've had a problem with the sewers creating an odor," said Mike Arnold at Tuesday's Village Board meeting. "We've gone through this before. The sewer company comes out and says there's nothing wrong."

The scent is especially strong north of Pontoon Road near Georgetown Drive, where Arnold lives.

Board Trustee Louis Whitsell explained the problem and said the only way to make sure there's a stop to it would be to place check valves on both sides of the pipe.

Whitsell said the valves would cost approximately $10,000 each and the sewer district would have to pay for it.

"That's a monstrous pipe which is quite long," said Whitsell. "There are concrete weights holding it down. It will raise up like a monster at times and that pumps air into the pipe. That pumps the gas up through people's toilets."

They need a check valve on each side of the line, something they don't have yet. If we get the sewer district out there, we can show them there is a problem."

Gene Futch of Madison County (sanitary sewer) Special Service Area 1 said Wednesday that a relief valve had been installed on the pipe after problems with it floating up were reported in 1988. He said, "If it's happening again, it's just a matter of cleaning the relief valve."

But, Futch said, "The only way we know there is a problem is if someone calls. Until the newspaper called, we didn't know there had been a problem."

Futch inspected the line Wednesday afternoon and found no problem. He said the pipe itself is not in any danger.

"It's a special plastic pipe like is used on off-shore oil rigs," he said. "It's made to flex up and down for a hundred years or so."

Mayor Glen Wilson said the sewer district had investigated complaints in the past and could find nothing wrong within the sewer line. Wilson said the district resorted to sending cameras down the pipe but no problems were located.

"Obviously, there's something wrong when people are still complaining," said Wilson. "I've called the sewer district and they haven't told us anything."

The village is in another bind on what to do about complaints concerning street problems. Some residents have said that large trucks are causing their houses to shake. In some cases, vibrations from the trucks have loosened plaster and knocked objects off shelves. Others have said sinkholes have become a serious threat.

With the threat of litigation looming, the village trustees want to correct the situation as soon as possible. But with Nameoki Township street workers currently on strike, help might be a long ways off.

If the village decided to hire a company to fix the problem, it might run into problems with the township, with whom the village contracts for road services.

"We don't know how long they'll be out, but we can't let this go any longer," said Wilson. "It's an emergency situation. We don't want to have to go and get outside help. But we have to do something. The township is not fulfilling their contract with us."

Weber-Cueto feud continuing

"I was hoping for a fair hearing. When it turned out it wasn't going to be one ... I've got better things to do."

— Don Weber
...leaves courtroom

A decision on hiring a special prosecutor to investigate Supreme Court candidate Don Weber may be made by Thursday.

But a 10-year political war between Weber and Belleville lawyer Amiel Cueto, who is calling for the investigation, is far from settled.

After a heated hearing Tuesday, Madison County Chief Judge Paul Riley removed Weber and St. Louis psychiatrist Edwin Wolfram from Cueto's petition for a special prosecutor. Cueto had filed an amended petition seeking to remove Weber and Wolfram as respondents, thus taking away Weber's ability to state his case in court.

At one point Riley told Weber and Cueto, who were quarreling over admitting several 5th District Appellate Court rulings, that if they didn't act like gentlemen he would have them removed from the courtroom.

"I'm not interested in your personal problems," Riley said, then excluded Weber and the psychiatrist as parties to the case.

Weber politely excused himself from the courtroom and later said, "I was hoping for a fair hearing. When it turned out it wasn't going to be one ... I've got better things to do."

Cueto is seeking the investigation because he said Weber was a party to perjury. Cueto claims that Wolfram lied in a 1989 deposition that was part of a libel suit Weber had filed against Cueto. The deposition, Cueto said, shows Weber is suffering from mental problems that cause suicidal tendencies and make him unfit for office. Cueto filed the special prosecutor after Wolfram later publicly stated that Weber was, in fact, fit for office.

Weber denied the accusations and called Cueto a "political serial assassin spouting off in court."

The hearing Tuesday heated up after Cueto offered as exhibits two appellate court rulings on a criminal case that said Weber was a persecutor, not a prosecutor.

Weber objected to the relevance and told Riley that Cueto was using the courtroom as a political forum.

Cueto countered: "The speech that was just made is a part of his political campaign."

Riley said he would decide by Thursday if the Madison County State's Attorney's Office will handle the investigation or an outside prosecutor will be hired.

State's Attorney William Haine, arguing to keep the investigation in his hands, said it's a quirk that Weber was involved in a civil lawsuit while working as an assistant state's attorney from April 1989 through July 1990.

'Weeping' statue to be displayed

By Mike Chambers
Staff writer

St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church will have a special attraction at its Saturday Mass when it displays the statue of Our Lady, Queen of Peace.

Noted as being the weeping statue, it was blessed by the Rev. James Bruse, a 37-year-old Catholic priest from Arlington, Va., reported to be afflicted with the stigmata — mysterious wounds which Christ suffered at crucifixion.

Bruse achieved nationwide interest, including a two-page article in the April 27 People magazine, when more than 500 witnesses reported seeing the wounds bleed during an April 12 Palm Sunday Mass this year.

Mary Knollmeyer, a St. Louis resident who will present the statue at Granite City's St. Elizabeth's Church, 2300 Pontoon Road, said the statue took on unexplained powers after Bruse blessed it.

"The Friday before Good Friday, Father Bruse carried this particular statue to the altar at St. Elizabeth (in Virginia) and kept it there for the whole Mass. People say it wept supernatural tears throughout the Mass," Knollmeyer said.

It was sent to Washington, D.C., for a Jan. 22 Right to Life rally, and is expected to finish its pilgrimage in that city.

Some believers of the statue's powers are helping to act as guardians, entrusted with its safety. They also organize viewings of the statue across the country.

Knollmeyer, who is the St. Louis area guardian, said it will be viewed in parishes that include St. Louis, Chicago and Boston.

She said it is reported to weep when not in Bruse's presence and also to have healing powers as well.

An Italian religious organization commissioned artists to carve the statue in the likeness of the Virgin Mary who, eyewitnesses say, appears on a hill in Medjugorje, Yugoslavia, frequently.

People can view the statue here from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

and payments to vendors. Workers would have less contact with clients, and child support collections, already a trouble spot, would slow even further, Bradley claimed.

While hospitals, doctors and pharmacists have a complaint about long delays in getting reimbursed for Medicaid treatment of the poor, Bradley said the department couldn't even afford to print the claim forms if the Democrats' budget are enacted.

Public Aid inspections of nursing homes would also have to be cut back, possibly jeopardizing federal funds, Bradley also said. The possible cuts are part of $240 million Democrats are trimming for Edgier's $28 billion budget.

"These cuts produce pain, misery and hardship among our clients who are already hurting. They would have devastating consequences on our ability to provide basic service to clients and providers, and to abide by regulations and court orders," Bradley said.

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED
Attorney At Law

The father of minor children may fall behind in his child support payments for a variety of reasons. In some cases, the father may be laid off from his job or he may be ill and unable to work. In other situations, he may make a voluntary decision to stop paying child support even though he could afford to pay. The question often arises in these cases as to whether the father should be held in contempt of court.

Generally speaking, the parent who is ordered to pay support will be held in contempt of court only where there was a "willful and contumacious refusal" to obey the order. In other words, the paying spouse must willfully disobey the court order in order to be held in contempt. The ex-husband will have to show that he had a valid excuse for his failure to pay.

The spouse who fails to pay can avoid being held in contempt if his failure to obey the order was due to poverty, insolvency or other misfortune. However, the defense of poverty and misfortune will be viewed as a valid excuse for nonpayment only in the most extreme cases. If the paying spouse has no money and no way of getting money to meet his support obligations, he will generally not be held in contempt of court.

In one recent case, a father was ordered to pay $35 per week per child in child support payments. Over a three-year period, he only made one $70 payment. He was eventually found in contempt of court and sentenced to six months in jail. However, he was allowed to clear himself of this contempt charge by paying $12,950 in arrearages.

The father took this case on appeal and argued that he should not be held in contempt since he had been virtually destitute and penniless during the years in question. He claimed that he had not made enough money from 1984 through 1988 to even be able to file income tax returns. The Appellate Court noted that there was no evidence of extreme circumstances of poverty to make this defense available to the father. The Court noted that no financial records of any kind were ever provided by him. In addition, he never submitted any proof of income to the trial court. For these reasons, the Appellate Court upheld the trial court's finding of contempt.

Yeah, we're old-fashioned

Larry Goldberg thinks the Press-Record is old-fashioned because we don't believe a topless-bottomless club would be an asset to Madison.

Not that Goldberg is willing to argue that other area strip joints are assets to their communities, in his arguments to Madison aldermen last week, he conceded they aren't. But Deja Vu would be different, he said.

Deja Vu, he said, would only attract the best customers: Doctors, lawyers, accountants — professionals like that.

The Press-Record's experience with strip-joint customers, based on police reports, has been more along the line of a person who has just "stuffed" a taxi driver or a person who has returned home and found he has "lost" the money from a recently-cashed Social Security check, so, gosh, this is new.

The dancers at Deja Vu would be good, wholesome girls who are working their way through college in order to become doctors, lawyers, accountants and professionals like that.

Since the Press-Record's experience with nude dancers, again based on police reports, has included prostitution, a sex-for-ticket-fixing scandal, and a shared girlfriend of a convicted leader and a convicted member of a large-scale drug ring, maybe we can be forgiven for not realizing that so many high-class nude dancers were available.

Larry Troesch said he is able to hire such high-class nude dancers because the customers are not allowed to touch the girls while they are nude. But Troesch must think it's essential for the nude girls to get pretty close. He said a rule requiring the nude girls to be at least five feet away — or even one foot away — from the customers is unacceptable. How about six inches? One inch? The thickness of an onion skin?

Troesch said his girls must be completely nude, not just topless, because of the area competition. Troesch said his establishment must have a complete liquor license with extended hours because of the area competition.

As far as we know, no member of the area competition ever approached a community with a proposal to open a low-class, sleazy dive that attracts low-lives and crime.

Yet, those types of places make up at least part of Troesch's area competition, usually to the chagrin of the community in which they are located. But, now that they're there, even a former St. Clair County state's attorney concedes, they're probably there to stay.

Goldberg and Troesch say the sky's the limit when it comes to the money Deja Vu can produce for Madison. But the experience of other area communities indicates that the pit strip joints can sink into it seemingly without bottom.

Goldberg and Troesch think people, and newspapers, who take an old-fashioned moralistic view of nude dancing and its evils make up only a small minority.

They may be right about that. Goldberg and Troesch think people, and newspapers, who take an old-fashioned moralistic view of nude dancing and its evils make up only a small minority. We believe they're wrong about that.

Debt prevents meeting our needs

(Comments by U.S. Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Springfield)

From every indication, the Balanced Budget Amendment is an idea whose time has come. Recently, the speaker of the House suggested there is sufficient support in the House to approve the resolution calling for this constitutional amendment.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Illinois, Senate sponsor of this amendment, has a promise from the Senate leadership that he will be given an opportunity to call the amendment for a vote in the next few weeks.

When the issue was last tested in the Senate, it lacked the two-thirds majority needed to be approved, by one vote. The changing sentiment on this issue reflects the gravity of our budget deficit and the desperation many legislators feel about this crisis.

This year's budget deficit is projected to be $400 billion, more than $1 billion a day. Our national debt has more than tripled since President Ronald Reagan took office in 1981.

Various efforts to stop the federal red ink, including the Gramm-Rudman Bill and the president's 1990 budget summit agreement, both of which were supposed to have reduced the deficit, have failed. Congressmen have jumped on the idea of a Balanced Budget Amendment as a guaranteed solution to our problem.

They argue that, if Congress is required under the Constitution to balance the budget each year, there will no longer be any room for excuses. But it would be a disservice to the voters to suggest that the amendment would solve our deficit problem without pain.

If Congress approves such an amendment, it will be by the fourth of the states, the burden will still fall on the shoulders of the president and Congress to make it work. That means cutting federal spending and/or raising taxes. To appreciate the challenge which faces us, we should recall the gravity of the situation. Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget office, who recently appeared before the House Budget Committee.

In his opinion, to achieve a balanced federal budget by 1997, it will be necessary to cut spending in progressively larger amounts each year. He estimated that in the next fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1, an additional $40 billion would have to be cut from federal spending; $80 billion the following year; and so on until 1997, when that figure would increase to over $200 billion.

I believe that the president and Congress have a responsibility to alert the voters, as well as the leaders of state legislatures, to the types of cuts that will be necessary.

Consider our basic federal budget. The $1.5 trillion that we will spend in the next fiscal year will be roughly divided into the following categories:

- $66 billion for the savings and loan bailout;
- $213 billion for interest on the national debt;
- $280 billion for national defense;
- $225 billion for domestic discretionary spending;
- $75 billion for entitlement programs.

The expenditures for the S&L bailout and interest on the debt are virtually inescapable. The defense figure already reflects a cut in uniformed forces and substantial cutbacks in weapons.

The domestic discretionary account, which includes everything from the FBI to the Food and Drug Administration, has seen no real growth in the last five years. Entitlements include Social Security, Medicare, veterans' benefits, agricultural programs, and many of the federal government's more popular expenditures.

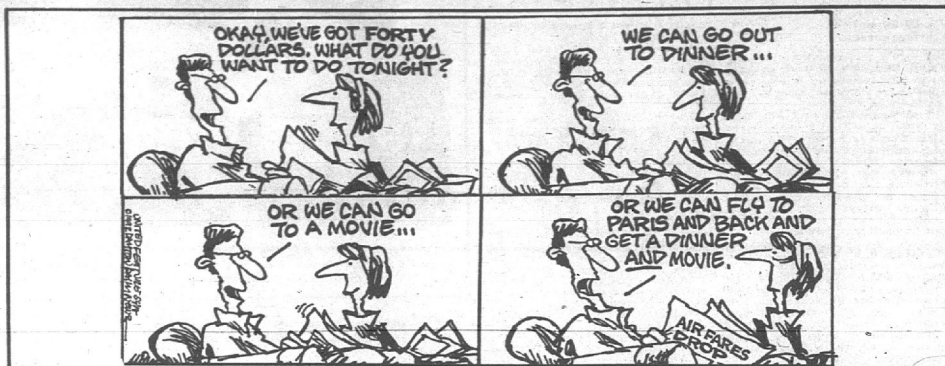

As painful as it will be, we have to alert the American people to the cuts which would take place in each of these areas in order to achieve a balanced budget. Legislators in the Illinois General Assembly must realize the federal government will no longer be available to cushion the blow of the medical bills coming in through Medicaid.

In future years, when the Chicago flood and the Los Angeles riots will be more reliant on local funds than federal disaster aid. Fewer dollars will be available for health care, aid to education, construction of highways and mass transit projects.

There is no question but that the federal deficit is a serious problem which must be addressed immediately.

Our democratic form of government requires that policymakers and legislators be very candid with the voters about the difficult choices which will have to be made in the years to come.

As more and more people call on the government to deal with job creation, health care needs, and improved education, we must give them the sad news that our ability to respond to real national needs will be diminished dramatically by a Balanced Budget Amendment.

Balanced budget vital to social programs

(The following column was written by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who formerly represented the Granite City area in the Illinois General Assembly.)

One of the arguments against having a balanced budget amendment in the Constitution — requiring that income match spending unless there is a 60 percent vote of Congress to have a deficit — is that it will hurt social programs.

The fact that I have spent my legislative career fighting for education and health care and other needed social programs I hope would at least cause some to pause enough in their passionate rhetoric to listen, and examine.

I would not be sponsoring the constitutional amendment if it would hurt investments we need to build a stronger, better nation.

There are many flaws in the opponents' approach, but let me mention just two:

1. In the past 10 years, after adjusting for inflation, these are the spending figures in the federal budget: non-defense discretionary (mostly domestic) programs, down 12 percent; defense, up 10 percent; entitlements (such as Social Security and Medicare) up 51 percent; gross interest, up 105 percent.

The interest growth — by far the biggest — is squeezing out our ability to respond with social programs.

In the next federal budget, gross interest for the first time will become the top spending item.

In the next 10 years, interest will be much worse unless it is somehow capped, and the only conceivable way to cap it is with a constitutional amendment. If it is not capped, social programs will suffer even more. Along with the country.

2. In the past 12 years, the amount spent for interest rose by a total of $1.461 trillion.

If 12 years ago we had had a constitutional amendment and had not spent the money on interest, would spending on social programs have dropped 12 percent? I doubt it. Would we have spent so much on fancy and frivolous weapons systems? I doubt it.

Would the 1981 tax bill have passed? Clearly, it could not have, and the result would be a fairer tax system today, lower interest rates and saving millions of jobs in this country that we have lost. The average income for a family would be higher.

Nothing is more important to most working and out-of-work Americans than jobs that pay well.

But studies show conclusively that the federal government deficit has been responsible for one-third to one-half of the trade imbalance, that we have lost much of our industrial base because of the budget deficit.

On top of that, long-term interest rates have discouraged not only industrial investment but also home construction, and that has aggravated both employment and housing problems.

Shouldn't these factors be weighed by those who promote a social agenda?

The absorption of so much of the world's savings for our deficit also has particularly hurt the poorer nations, which have to pay higher interest rates to borrow (just as our citizens do.) And when poorer nations suffer, their people struggle harder for basics and they are less able to purchase products made in the United States.

One of the nation's greatest weaknesses is our failure to do long-term thinking. It is true of the governmental sector and also of the private sector.

Including, unfortunately, some in the private sector who speak for causes in which I believe strongly.

In this case, their opposition to a balanced budget amendment will harm the causes they advocate, if they succeed.

Fatality likely at 20th, State

TO THE EDITOR:

Moments ago, I heard a too-familiar sound, that of brakes screeching as one driver attempted to avoid hitting another at 20th and State streets.

Fortunately, this time, the sound was not the result of a crash of steel crunching steel and glass shattering, which we have heard dozens of times in the past year.

More than a year ago, engineers conducted traffic studies in the intersection. As a businessman whose office is nearby, I inquired what they were doing.

They said they were studying whether or not to remove the stop sign on 20th Street for traffic coming from Madison Avenue toward the YMCA.

I told the engineers that removing the stop sign, which had been there for decades, was the worst thing that could be done.

Amateur motorists would assume that traffic would stop, as it always has, where the stop sign used to be.

Of course, the engineers knew more than those of us who work near the intersection and have to cross it each day. Instead of listening to our recommendations that a four-way stop would be preferable to removing a long-standing stop sign, they ordered the stop sign removed.

I argued with city workers removing the sign, predicting correctly what that action would cause. They were just doing their job, I was told.

The carnage started that night. The first week, accidents at that intersection averaged nearly one per day, not counting evenings and nights, when we were not here.

Amidst the frequent accidents, many persons were injured and damage to vehicles in the past year must have topped $100,000.

I assumed the frequent accidents would result in action. Hopefully, the action I recommended when the studies first started, installing a four-way stop. Unfortunately, the numerous accidents have been ignored.

Admittedly, as people slowly get used to the fact that the stop sign has been removed, accidents have decreased. Now there is only about one serious accident per week there, which is, I assume, within acceptable boundaries.

However, hardly a day goes by without us hearing at least one near-accident.

This is a very busy intersection, with a great many tractor-trailers hauling steel and other heavy materials passing through each hour, many at 30 to 40 miles per hour.

Just as I predicted the large number of accidents which would occur should the stop sign be removed, I predict that a fatal accident will soon occur if the problem is not resolved.

I ask the city to look at the police department's records of accidents at 20th and State streets since the sign was removed and at least consider rectifying the situation before several lives are lost.

Productivity at SIUE must rise

TO THE EDITOR:

As members of the university faculty at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, we feel obligated to respond to a critical letter by an SIUE graduate.

The university community is at a crossroads. It is very clear to many of us that work here that the resources that we have had in the past will no longer be available to us.

Gov. Jim Edgar has indicated to the state universities that they must become involved in identifying priorities, maintaining quality and increasing productivity related to the educational mission.

SIUE, under the leadership of President Earl Lazerson, has been involved in efforts to use its resources effectively for a long time.

There are processes in the SIUE system that involve students, faculty and staff in planning and resource allocation.

The University Planning and Budget Council has just met, with recommendations that will guide university activities over the next four years.

Active discussion, open response to a variety of viewpoints, and a firm belief that shared governance is the most effective approach in these times of difficult decision-making characterized the interactions of these meetings.

We are determined to make decisions that affect people's lives. Lazerson, the faculty and the staff at SIUE are concerned about what decisions will be made and how they will be made.

We are not clones and do not feel our colleagues are clones of the administration.

Higher alcohol tax devastating

TO THE EDITOR:

I operate one of 152 beer wholesaling operations in Illinois. As a distributor, I am a proud business entrepreneur who employs hard-working family people in my company. I contribute to the community's welfare and, most of all, I pay taxes.

Across Illinois, the beer industry and related businesses in 1991 contributed more than $9 billion to the state economy.

We employed 38,300 persons within the industry and 46,900 in secondary businesses. We paid $174 million in state and local taxes and our full tax impact was $385 million, not including the $85 million paid in federal excise taxes on beer.

I am fully aware of the financial problems which currently face our state government. But I also disagree that state government should try to solve its problems by punishing a single segment of our society.

Yet, that is Governor Jim Edgar's plan. The governor has proposed an increase in the alcohol excise tax — the tax paid by the wholesaler — from seven to 22 cents per gallon.

The economic impact of the proposed increase would be devastating, particularly in areas near a state border.

Illinois would have a tax more than double that of our surrounding states. Beer sales would drop drastically, resulting in a loss of approximately 4,500 people.

If you readers agree with me that a tripling of the tax on beer would be harmful to our economy, I urge them to write their legislators before the issue comes to a vote in June in Springfield.

Collinsville police scored their biggest victory yet last month in the cat-and-mouse game played by drug couriers and law enforcement officers.

A traffic stop on Interstate 55/70 May 30 yielded about 500 pounds of high-grade marijuana.

The bust was the latest, and the largest, in a series of drug arrests made recently on area highways. About two weeks earlier, Fairmont City police seized more than 150 pounds of cocaine in another I-55/70 traffic stop.

Still, local law enforcement officials said such dramatic arrests only scratch the surface of the tons of drugs that move across this area's highways.

"It has to be astronomical," Collinsville Chief David Niebur said Monday.

"We spend less than 20 percent of our time on the interstate and, just in the last three months, we've confiscated 600 pounds of marijuana, plus quantities of cocaine and other controlled substances."

"That gives you an idea of how much drugs go through Collinsville," he said.

Niebur, Lt. Jere Juenger of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group of Southwestern Illinois, Madison County State's Attorney Bill Haine and Clifford J. Proud, first assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, all agreed that the Metro East area — and Collinsville, in particular — is a major crossroads for drug traffic.

Proud said the volume of drugs on the highways has been increasing because of successful crackdowns by federal agencies like the Customs Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Coast Guard against couriers using boats and airplanes.

And he added that the crackdown has forced many drug smugglers out of the Southeastern United States to the Southwest, Mexico and the West Coast.

"What they're seeing is that flow that comes up I-44 out of Texas and that area down there," Juenger said. "It's coming up 44, picking up I-70, then going through St. Louis and right into Illinois, then up I-55 to Chicago."

With three interstate highways — 64, 55 and 70 — converging around Collinsville and 2,000 motel rooms in the area, it is a magnet for drug dealers, the officials said.

Haine praised the work of Collinsville's E Shift in helping to put some fear into the hearts of drug couriers.

"Collinsville was in danger a couple years ago of becoming not only a place where the drugs pass through, but a place where some transfer was being done in the motels," he said. "But I think that is becoming less likely because of the work of the E Shift."

"The word will get around that Collinsville is a hot spot, and not a good place for drug dealing," Haine said.

"We feel very good about it," Niebur said. "While we're only impacting drug trafficking on a very minute scale, we feel that every little bit helps. We want people to be very fearful of bringing drugs into Collinsville, no matter what the destinations of the drugs are."

In Saturday's arrest, Collinsville police stopped a 1990 Dodge caravan on I-55/70 at 4:16 p.m. after Sgt. Ed Delmore noticed the driver speeding and driving erratically.

Officers became suspicious when the driver, Steven T. Sarkissian, 36, of Silver City, N.M., appeared nervous and made inconsistent statements of his travel plans.

The department's canine, Baron, sniffed out drugs in the van. Officers then discovered several suitcases and vinyl duffel bags containing more than 40 heat-sealed bags containing about 500 pounds of high-grade marijuana.

Because of the bags, Baron's sensitive nose was invaluable in detecting the drugs, Niebur said.

There was so much pot that it would not fit into the department's evidence locker. It was loaded into a jail cell, where it was stored over the weekend.

Sarkissian later told police the drugs were destined for New York state, and had come from Arizona. Sarkissian was charged Monday with marijuana trafficking and was being held in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Niebur credited training by the Institute of Police Technology and Management, a Florida-based company, with the Collinsville Police Department's recent success in intercepting drug shipments. He feels that all police departments should undergo similar training in drug interdiction.

Juenger agreed. "We're just getting now to where we're getting uniformed units to keep their eyes open," he said. "The last couple of years, we have been trying to get more and more local departments to keep their eyes open, particularly on traffic stops."

"If you can get them to do that, the likelihood is that we can have some impact on the drug traffic."

Job bias Most believe women don't get equal opportunity

To climb the corporate ladder, does it help to be a man?

More bad news from the work-front. If you're a woman who's competing for a promotion against a man, most American workers believe you'll lose.

According to an Accountants On Call (AOC) national poll conducted by the Gallup Organization Inc., just 36 percent of American workers believe that women have the same opportunities for promotions as men, and 60 percent report they do not.

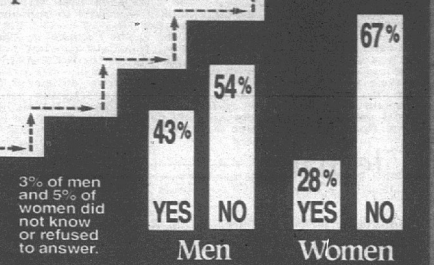

This new survey on equality in the workplace is part of an ongoing "Profiles of the American Worker" series which summarizes the opinions, attitudes and behavior of employed Americans concerning workplace issues.

For the survey, full- and part-time workers were asked the following: "Compared to men in the workplace, do you believe women are treated equally with respect to their chances for promotion?"

While a majority of employed adults from most demographic groups—including men—believe women are not treated equally with respect to promotions, men are less likely to believe this is the case (54 percent vs. 67 percent) and more likely than women to believe that women are treated equally (43 percent vs. 28 percent).

Life may begin at 40, but for women it may not be the best of times career-wise. Adults between the ages of 40 and 49 are more likely than those younger to believe women are not treated equally with regard to their chances for promotions (72 percent).

While the majority of workers in all occupations report inequality regarding promotions, manual workers are divided in their opinion (46 percent believe women are treated equally and 48 percent do not). Those who have attended college and workers in professional, business, clerical and sales occupations more often than their counterparts believe that women are not treated equally.

This survey is based on telephone interviews with a representative sample of 684 adults, 18 years of age or older, who are employed either full- or part-time. Interviews were conducted by Gallup between Feb. 10 and Feb. 16. The margin of sampling error associated with this survey is plus or minus four percentage points.

With over 50 offices nationwide, Accountants On Call is currently the country's second largest specialist in the placement of temporary and permanent accounting and bookkeeping personnel.

viewed intend to add more staff, 5 percent plan labor reductions and another 67 percent foresee no changes," said St. Louis area spokesman Ron Ramler. Ramler said that in general employers are usually quite upbeat during the summer months. "Current results are stronger than those of a quarter ago, when 25 percent anticipated adding personnel while 10 percent predicted staff cuts. Last year at this time, 13 percent planned increases and 12 percent expected to trim employment rolls. Of more than 15,000 companies interviewed, 25 percent expected to increase employment rolls. Only 8 percent anticipated staff cutbacks.

Patel receives critical care certification

Kamuhai M. Patel, MD, an internist cardiologist on staff at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, Granite City, has received certification in critical-care medicine from the American Internal Board of Medicine.

According to Dr. Patel, the board tested his theoretical and practical knowledge as well as his actual experience in treating critically ill patients.

The test covered the areas of neurology, cardiology, pulmonary, gastroenterology, infectious diseases, kidney problems and blood disorders, all of which are involved in the care of critically ill patients.

"I studied for the test for one year. It was difficult doing this and keeping up with my practice, but I always liked to study," Dr. Patel said.

"I enjoy medicine and want to do my best, so it was good for me to have this objective evidence that I am meeting the board's high standards."

Dr. Patel has been a member of the medical staff at SEMC for 18 years. He also is on staff at Christian Hospital Northeast in St. Louis.

"There are so many changes taking place in the field of critical care that it becomes a challenge to keep up," Dr. Patel said.

"You can't become stagnant."

That's why this certification is so important to me. To receive this certification you must know about so many different areas of critical care. It is a good feeling to know I have met their standards."

All Granite City residents are being invited to participate in the Leukemia Society's walk-athon at Wilson Park on Saturday, June 13, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The event is intended to generate public awareness about leukemia as well as to raise funds needed to aid in the fight against this malignant disease, which affects blood-forming tissues and organs.

To participate, persons may pick up a sponsor form at the Granite City Wal-Mart at Illinois Highway 3 and West Pontoon Road; Schnucks, 3401 Nameoki

Walk-athon Chairman Charles Geer said a limited supply of pledge forms can also be obtained by calling him at WGNJ Radio at 451-9950 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Participants have friends, neighbors or co-workers sign up on their behalf," Geer said, "and then walk as many times as they wish on the Fitness Path between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday. Each trip around the park is approximately 1.4 miles, and it takes only about 45 minutes for the average walker."

On Thursday, June 25, the Walk-On Support Group, sponsored by Thomas Mortuaries, will spend an evening at the Fairmount Park horse race track.

"Everyone is welcome to join the Walk-On Group for the evening," Bob Thomas, president of Thomas Mortuaries Ltd., said. "The cost of $25 includes bus transportation from the Nameoki Presbyterian Church, track admission, the racing program and a Black Stallion Restaurant buffet dinner."

"This is our third trip to the race track," Thomas said. "Everyone has enjoyed it so much in the past that we decided to repeat the trip this year. The cost includes everything except betting on the races; we leave that up to the individual."

To reserve a place for the Walk-On "Night at the Races" June 25, persons may call Thomas Mortuaries 876-4321 by June 21.

Aerne earns master's at Yale

The graduating class of 1992 at the Yale School of Organization and Management includes Debra Aerne and Marilyn Aerne, both of Granite City. She is receiving a Master's in Public and Private Management.

Debra Aerne attended Yale on a Fellowship from General Motors Corporation. She will continue her career with them in Pontiac, Mich.

Since its founding in 1976, the Yale School of Organization and Management has gained international recognition for its path-breaking approach to management education. Yale's program explores the issues and concerns of every sector — business, government, and nonprofit — in one integrated program. Those elements are usually addressed separately in traditional MBA and public management programs.

The 1992 graduating class includes 202 graduates from throughout the United States and around the world. Twenty-six percent of the class are international students, from 20 different countries. Upon enrolling in the Yale program, students had an average of five years of work experience. Thirty-four percent of the class previously worked in government or nonprofit organizations.

The median GMAT score was 660, reputed to be the highest score of any of the nation's graduate management/business schools.

7-2 Post 113 win is 100 for Burnett

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

The Triplets used a tried and true formula Wednesday. Good pitching and timely hitting led to a 7-2 win over Alton Post 126 in the season opener at Varsity Field. The victory was No. 100 for manager Ralph Burnett as he begins his sixth season.

"Now that I have it, it seems important," said Burnett. "But it's not for me or this group as much as it is a culmination of all the other kids who have come through here the last few years."

But it was this group that did it, particularly Drake Marshall. He seems ready to put a disappointing high school season behind. He struck out 11 and allowed only four hits in six innings to gain the win. Marshall also delivered a bases-loaded triple in the third inning off Alton starter and loser Shawn Boschert, then doubled and scored in the fifth.

"Drake couldn't get loose at first and the pitches were up," said Burnett. "But he said he felt better a little later and everyone could tell that. It's a fresh start for him. Everyone knows how important he is to this team."

Alton scored a run on John Puente's RBI single in the first and got an unearned run in the seventh with the help of two hit batsmen by Chris Hill. Randy Scott got two strikeouts to finish up.

"Chris was just a little over-excited," said Burnett. "He can't take that with him the next time out. And Randy is really going to be a good pitcher for us."

Post 113 only managed five hits, but three went for extra bases.

Walks kill juniors in 7-3 loss to Alton

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

Walks always seem to come back to haunt pitchers. Junior Triplet starter Mark Winfield must have thought he was in a house of horrors Wednesday night as he walked six batters and saw four of them score in a 7-3 loss to Alton.

Alton (3-3) scored four runs in the third and added three more in the fourth to get out to a 7-0 lead that Granite City (1-1) couldn't recover from.

Alton scored in the third with two outs. Walks to the No. 8 and hitters and a single by David Zorger loaded the bases with one out. Winfield, who only allowed two earned runs, came back to strike out Jeff Coles for the second out.

After a borderline 1-2 pitch, Corey Ozark hit a dribbler between first and second that went for an infield hit and drove in Chris Roth. Chris Curtis followed with a single to left that was misplayed. All three base-runners scored to make it 4-0.

"If they call that a strike we're out of the inning with no harm done," said Granite City coach Doug Winfield. "We got behind last night (a 10-4 win over Collinsville) and scored some runs. We couldn't do it again."

Coles, who picked up the win, fanned 13 and only allowed one free pass in going the distance. Granite City hitters helped him on occasion by going after his high fastballs.

Alton went ahead 7-0 in the fourth. Jeff Ridenour scored for Granite City's offensive output with a three-run homer in the sixth.

"(Jason) Black did a good job out there to finish up. Donnie Harris hit the ball well, and Jeff really curled his home run," said Winfield.

Chad Dooley pitched six innings in Wednesday's win against Collinsville.

Athletes of the Year Kahoks' Krietemeyer competes with touch of class

By David Wilhelm
Staff writer

For sports fans at Collinsville High School, it was easy to become familiar with senior Kevin Krietemeyer. He was the rugged, in-your-face midfielder/striker during the Kahoks' state-championship soccer season last fall.

During the winter, he was the pesky, off-the-bench guard who helped Collinsville reach the state basketball tournament for the first time in 14 years.

In baseball this spring, he terrorized opposing pitchers at a .465 clip, which included a 26-game hitting streak. He was a gritty, slick-fielding second baseman for the Kahoks, who won 18 of 28 games.

His overall excellent play for three highly successful teams is why Kevin Krietemeyer is the Suburban Journals male Athlete of the Year in Illinois, as voted on by sports editors and sports staff members on both sides of the river.

Locally, Granite City High School standouts who received consideration were Larry Curry, Drake Marshall and Jason Maxfield.

Krietemeyer shined in the classroom as well as on the field, finishing with a 4.67 grade point average on a 4.0 scale, fifth-best among approximately 400 CHS seniors.

"I don't like to fail at anything, and that goes over into sports and academics," said Krietemeyer. "I don't like losing, and when I get a bad grade I feel like I lost."

For Krietemeyer, a bad grade is a B, even when it comes in advanced classes like physics, calculus and trigonometry.

"Once he reached high school, he was way beyond me," said Kevin's mother, Dorothy, a seventh grade teacher at North Junior High in Collinsville.

"Kevin is a quiet, reserved individual, unlike his father," said his father, Fred. "He sits back and observes and is very analytical. He always has a way of spotting the best in people."

"I figure if I'm saying something bad about other people, then they can be saying something bad about me," said Kevin. "I wouldn't want that to happen."

One couldn't squeeze a bad word out of any of Krietemeyer's coaches - Ron Rowden (soccer), Bob Bone (basketball) and Steve McFall (baseball).

Rowden: "The biggest thing is that he's reliable. He'll give 100 percent at any position. He's unselfish and will do anything for the team. He leads by his actions and doesn't look for all the glory. Off the field or on, he's always enjoyable to be around."

Bone: "He was a kid who got everything out of his God-given ability. He excelled in three sports and he excelled in the classroom. He's one of those kids who doesn't come around very often in terms of being a great athlete and a great person."

McFall: "In 20 years of coaching, he's the hardest-working kid I've ever coached. His attitude was even as a freshman. I don't know what I could say bad about him."

Fred Krietemeyer isn't surprised Kevin has had such a successful athletic career at Collinsville.

Before turning to basketball and baseball, Kevin Krietemeyer (left) helped lead Collinsville High School to the state soccer title last fall.

"Three weeks to a month before soccer season was over, he was running up and down the steps in our house for 30 to 45 minutes every day, getting his legs in shape for basketball," Fred said. "And during basketball season, he'd come home from practice huffy, then go down to the gym and take batting practice. He does all that on his own."

Kevin will begin pursuit this fall of a finance degree at Florida State University.

Marnie's magic in two sports reaches national level

By Scott Marlon
Staff writer

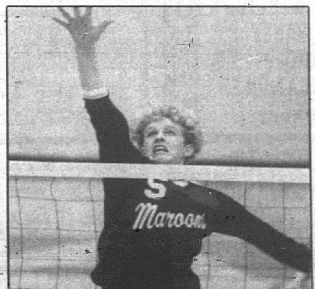

A select few athletes are recognized simply by their first names.

Ozzie Magic Kareem. Marnie. OK, maybe Marnie Triefenbach isn't a household name across the nation. But the Belleville West senior is just as dominant in not one, but two, sports.

Last fall, Triefenbach led the Maroons to their second consecutive Class AA state volleyball championship. She was also named by USA Today as its national prep player of the year.

In basketball, Triefenbach and the Maroons recovered from a slow start to reach the sectional championship game for the second straight year.

For the second straight year, Triefenbach is the Suburban Journals Illinois Female title. The lopsided victories were a far cry from 1990, when the Maroons fought off six match points to beat Chicago Mother McAuley in the semifinals.

"(The '91 state tourney) wasn't as dramatic, but it was definitely as much fun," Triefenbach said. "The year before was special because it was the first time we were state champions."

"(In 1990) I had a lot of good friends on the court. This year my best friends were out there, and it made it even more special."

Regarded as one of the top volleyball recruits in the nation, Triefenbach signed a scholarship to Stanford University last fall.

"After I signed with Stanford, I just went out and had fun," Triefenbach said. "The other girls, especially Rena (Zenarosa) and Karen (Sager), supported me 100 percent."

If other people regard Triefenbach as a star, she doesn't think of herself that way. Her reaction to winning the national player of the year award is typically modest.

"My uncle was in Philadelphia when he bought a copy of USA Today," Triefenbach said. "He opened the paper and saw my name in there, then called home to tell me. I had no idea (about winning the award). It didn't even cross my mind."

In basketball, USA Today named Triefenbach an honorable mention all-American. "I didn't expect that at all, either," she said. "It might look good to a college recruiter, but once you're signed and delivered, it doesn't matter."

Triefenbach is undecided about playing basketball at Stanford, which has national powerhouses in both sports and is one of the top academe institutions in the country.

"As much as I would like to say I'm definitely going to play, I can't," she said. "I don't know what to expect from volleyball. My first priority is to see how my grades are going."

Triefenbach plans to be a pre-dental major. "As far as career plans, I'm not sure," she said. "I'm looking at something along the lines of oral surgery, orthodontics or dentistry for kids."

With a 4.3 grade point average on a scale of 4.0, Triefenbach appears ready for Stanford.

Jenny Baker in All-American meet in Chicago on Saturday

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

Now that Jenny Baker is a high school graduate, her diving is starting to make some waves on a national level.

Baker, who came within less than two points of winning the state diving championship last fall, has been selected to compete this weekend in the National High School Swimming and Diving Championships, making her an All-American. Only six senior female divers from across the country were selected by invitation only.

"I was hopeful of being selected, but I really had no clue," said Baker, who leaves Friday for Chicago.

The competition will be held at Winnetka North Trier High School, which might give Baker an edge over her competition. It was there on Nov. 16, 1991, that she piled up 432.85 points and narrowly missed edging out three-time state champion Carrie Zarse of Rockford Auburn for the state title.

"At least I know the boards at New Trier," said Baker. "I don't know any of the other girls who have been invited, but I at least know of a couple of them. It's going to be tough."

Baker might as well get used to competing nationally. She will dive in Junior Olympic competition later this summer, then she begins her college career at the University of Kentucky in the fall.

"This is something I had in the back of my mind until I found out about it Monday," said Baker. "All the high school divers turned in a tape of all their dives from the state meet."

Baker is helping her coach, Gayle McCormick, with the diving program at Paddlers.

"I'm going out with Gayle early in the morning to do some work before the other kids get there," she said. "Then I go over to St. Louis for some more work in the afternoon. It's crazy training right now. I need to work a little harder, but my dives are better right now than I thought they would be."

The weekend trip is completely paid for by the State Farm Insurance Co. Preliminaries are Saturday morning, then the final rounds will be in the afternoon. ESPN will televise the finals at a later date.

2 volleyball clinics slated at GCHS gym this summer

Two volleyball clinics will be held at Granite City High School this summer.

For all incoming freshmen through current juniors, their clinic is from July 20-23. The clinic will again be directed by Julie Paska, an All-American middle hitter for four years at Illinois State University. She will be assisted by two current or former Division I athletes.

The clinic will run from 9 a.m. to noon, and from 5-8 p.m. each day. The clinic will promote fundamental skills of ballhandling, develop team play and team cohesiveness. All participants must have proof of a physical brought with them to the clinic.

The cost is $70 per person. Make checks payable to Cindy Gagich, the head volleyball coach at GCHS. The registration deadline is July 1. Registration forms are available at the high school office and must be returned to Gagich at the high school, 3101 Madison Ave., Granite City, Ill., 62040. The other clinic is for sixth, seventh and eighth graders and will be held July 13-16. Gagich will direct the camp, assisted by former GCHS player Beth Earey. The camp will run from 9 a.m. to noon, and from 1:30-4 p.m. each day. The cost is $30 per person and registration information is the same as above.

Both clinics will be held at Memorial Gymnasium. For more information, call Gagich at the high school, 451-5808.

Winners in the 14 and under division of the Optimist Junior World of Golf Tournament were, left to right, Greg Bixler (second place), David Martin (first) and Ryan Szymarek (third).

Gabe Mitchell advances in Optimist golf tourney

Gabe Mitchell won the Granite City Optimist Club golf tournament held May 30 at the Legacy.

Mitchell took first place with a round of 75 in the 15 and over division. He automatically advances to the Illinois District Tournament in Champaign on June 22-23. Joe Brewer and Steve Rains, teammates of Mitchell's on the Granite City High School golf team, tied for second place, with Brewer eventually taking second in a sudden death playoff.

David Martin claimed first place in the 14 and under division, followed by Greg Bixler in second and Ryan Szymarek in third.

Mitchell will compete in a two-day tournament on the Orange Course at the University of Illinois, according to tournament director Linda Vaught. The winner of the Illinois District Tournament will advance to the International Championships at Torrey Pines in San Diego. The Granite City Optimist Club will sponsor Mitchell throughout the tournament.

Cub Master Richard Waeltermann welcomed everyone to the Pack Graduation. Assistant Cub Master Don Lee asked Den 5, lead by Waeltermann, to present the Colors. Lee proceeded to light the Spirit of Scouting Candle.

With summer coming, the pack decided the scouts needed a little extra care in treating accidents that might occur, that they have not learned about. Lee introduced Ron Whitt from the Collinsville Paramedic Fire Department to talk about burns, cuts, and splints that may happen this summer.

Advancement Chairman Chuck Collins presented awards earned to:

- Den 2: Perry Manning, Matt Hayden, Chip Christensen, Jimmy Scrump, and Billy Webb all received one Gold and two Silver Arrow Points.

- Den 6: Jason Brandon, Ryan Davenport, and Chris McNammy all received on-year pins. Andrew Hagler received his Bear Badge.

- Den 8: Wolf Badges went to Joanthan Hagler, Nathan Bernaix, Adam Stout, and Danny Rouch. Kelly Watson, Leader of Den 8 received a three-year Pin and Certificate of Appreciation.

- Den 5: Noah Condray received his Webelos Badge, Athlete, Craftsman, Family Member, Handyman, Readyman, and Traveler. Brian Bogovich received Athlete Readyman and Compass Badge. Chris Pollard received Webelos Badge and Fitness. Joe Freeze received his Traveler Activity Pin.

Waeltermann said there will be no more indoor Pack Meetings for three months. The next will be June 18, at Shelter 5, a family picnic. Waeltermann asked the pack and family members to back the pack in its spaghetti dinner fund raiser from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, June 13, at the Eagles dining room.

Waeltermann asked Tom Shipley, Tiger organizer, to perform the Tiger Graduation. Those graduating were Gary Huges, Alex Guika, Darin Williams, Matt Mueller, Robin Cluts, Shipley introduced the new Leaders, Mr. and Mrs. Guika and Mr. Cluts.

The Den 3 Flag was presented to them.

Waeltermann presided over the Changing of the Blue Scarfs of the Bears. Den 7 as follows: Jared Davis, Matt George, Kyle Johnson, Shannon Shannafelt, Aaron Stovall, Daniel Worthan, Nathan Ruebhausen, Danny Roach, and Adam Stout.

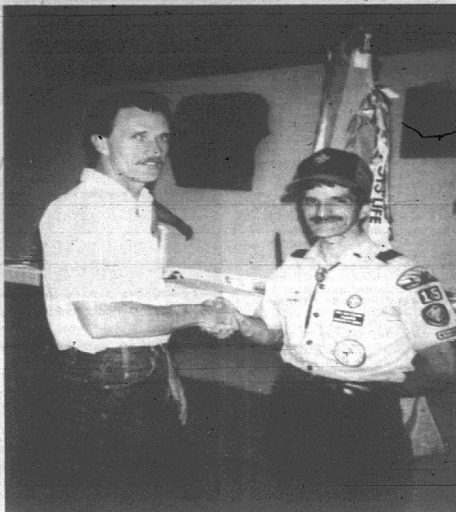

Den 2 Bears as follows: Nathan Bernaix, Joanthan Hagler, Perry Manning, Matt Manning, William Webb, James Schrum, and Walter Christian-son.

Lee had 2nd year Webelos form a sitting circle with Brave Chief Assistant Cub Master Dan Worthen standing in the center. Lee called 1st year Webelos and parents to stage. Den 6: Ryan Davenport, Jason Brandon, Sal Ochoa, Andrew Hagler, and Chris McNammy.

Den 1—Jon Dickerson, Stephen Bledsoe, Jamie Gavielsky, John Heck, Joshua Reyes, Adam Johnnesse, Andy Schwierjohn, and Michael Smith. After exchanging scarfs, New Webelos were asked to join their Webelos braves in the circle. Lee asked for three hip-hop-ho-ays. Chief Worthen rattled the drum of acceptance.

Refreshments of cake and soda were served by mothers of Den 7.

Waeltermann wished the pack a happy and safe summer. Colors were retired by Den 5.

'Patriot Games' gives Ford another starring hero's role

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

When it comes to stating his views on doing interviews, actor Harrison Ford, usually a quiet, reclusive man in public, is a lot quicker than he is in answering most questions.

"Let's face it," Ford says with a touch of resentment in his voice, "it's the moral equivalent of selling encyclopedias door-to-door. I know it and you know it. I don't like it, but marketing a film has become a major responsibility for people who get top billing in a picture, so I do it."

Under the grind of talking about his latest film, "Patriot Games," in which he plays CIA analyst and American hero Jack Ryan, Ford measures his words carefully. Dressed in a rummer, weight, olive green suit, Ford resembles more a board member of an established country club than one of Hollywood's most bankable stars.

Through Ford's trademark roles like Indiana Jones in the popular film series and Han Solo in the "Star Wars" trilogy, the 49-year-old Chicago native has developed a persona among movie fans that makes him a top choice when it comes to playing good guys.

"I don't set out to play a hero," Ford said. "I set out to help tell through the character the story that is the bones of the film. Such issues as whether or not the character is a hero or if the character has something to say politically is not something I think about."

"It seems to me that what works on film," Ford said, "is that no matter who the character is, no matter what the circumstances of the character are, there has to be something between the character and the audience that seals the deal and draws the audience into the story or makes people feel an emotional consistency between themselves and the characters. There has to be something in common between the audience and the character for it to work."

"It ain't what makes us different—it's what we all have in common, our common humanity, that accounts for some of the power of the movies."

Ford's deal with Paramount Pictures is a three-picture, one-at-a-time arrangement, said Ford, who maintains final say on scripts and directors. Alec Baldwin turned down Ford's role in "Patriot Games" to star in "A Streetcar Named Desire" on Broadway.

Ford received a reported $4 million dollars to star in "Patriot Games." It is estimated by industry analysts that he'll get $10 million for the next film, "Clear and Present Danger." Ford's compensation for a projected third film is open to negotiations, based on the success of the first two pictures.

All three films are based on novels by Tom Clancy.

Playing Ryan has shown Ford this is one character with whom he has some things in common.

"Jack Ryan is a person who, thinks about what he does, cares about what he does, has an emotional life which he doesn't ignore and finds himself in circumstances that are extremely complex and trying," he said. "I think we've given expression to that complexity in 'Patriot Games.'"

Ford lives on a ranch outside a small town in Wyoming, which he will not name. His wife is screenwriter Melissa Mathison, whose credits include "E.T.," the "Extraterrestrial" and "The Black Stallion." Ford has three sons—Benjamin, Willard and Malcolm—and a daughter named Georgia.

"I've always planned to live in a small, out-of-the-way place," Ford said. "I've never wanted to live in Los Angeles or any major urban area. I enjoy my family and my privacy, and I don't want either invaded."

Jack Ryan (Harrison Ford), his wife Cathy (Anne Archer) and their daughter Sally (Thora Birch) are swept into a game of international terrorism in "Patriot Games."

In "Patriot Games," Jack Ryan (Harrison Ford, right) challenges Paddy O'Neil (Richard Harris) to reveal his knowledge of a terrorist plot against the Ryan family.

'Games' lacks spirit of predecessor

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

In "Patriot Games," Harrison Ford reprises the role of CIA analyst Jack Ryan from the successful "The Hunt for Red October," and Ford is as qualified to play a yuppie patriot as anyone I know.

Alec Baldwin played Ryan, a reluctant hero who helps save the world from a nuclear mishap, in the first film.

Like its predecessor, "Patriot Games" is based on the successful novel by the popular writer Tom Clancy. In this story, Ryan has taken his wife and daughter, played by Anne Archer and Thora Birch, respectively, to London. It's part of a trip involving a speaking engagement for Ryan.

Jack has retired from the CIA and is now teaching at the U.S. Naval Academy.

While in London, Ryan inadvertently gets caught in the middle of an attempt by an IRA splinter group to kidnap members of the royal family. Ryan thwarts the covert action, killing one of the perpetrators in the resulting gunplay.

Wounded himself, Ryan becomes a hero on both sides of the Atlantic to everyone except a maniac IRA terrorist named Kevin O'Donnell, played by Patrick Bergin. O'Donnell and his brother were part of the kidnap plot.

O'Donnell vows revenge against Ryan and doesn't let a little matter like the Atlantic Ocean stand in his way of setting the score against Ryan.

Richard Harris appears in "Patriot Games" as Paddy O'Neil, a spokesman and leader for the IRA who claims they were not part of the kidnap plot. "Patriot Games" is less chatty than "The Hunt for Red October" and a lot less high-tech. It has a subdued, straight-forward approach to action. While it is serviceable, high-energy entertainment, "Patriot Games" lacks the impulsive, zealous spirit that made its predecessor a hit.

If you have not seen the first film, then "Patriot Games" will most likely seem like another run-of-the-mill contemporary action movie with star casting and a few supporting cast.

Rated R (adult language and situations, plus depictions of violence). Running time: 117 minutes.

Tony Williams focuses on the future

By Alan Sculley
Correspondent

These days, Tony Williams' thoughts are very much focused on the present, as he begins a headlining tour with his acclaimed quintet supporting the new release, "The Story Of Neptune."

"We're looking forward to the whole tour," Williams said of the 13-city excursion, which is getting a financial boost through a sponsorship deal with Gilbey's Gin. "I'm really happy because it's the first time I've ever been associated with a product, even though I'm not a drinker."

But soon Williams' thoughts will turn toward the past, back to the 1960s, when he, keyboardist Herbie Hancock, saxophonist Wayne Shorter and bassist Ron Carter backed jazz legend Miles Davis in what many consider the late trumpeter's greatest group. The foursome will reunite later this year with trumpet player Wallace Roney (borrowed from Williams' own acclaimed quartet) taking Davis' role in a tribute tour to their famous mentor and bandleader.

Plans for the tribute tour were set into motion almost as soon as the news of Davis' death last fall reached Williams and his former band mates.

"I guess the day we all found out he had passed, we all got on the phone with each other and sort of emotionally committed to do what we could to realize his monumental six-year stint in the group was."

"I was so young that I thought it was very natural for him to call me up," Williams said. "I mean, it was a goal that I had had, to play with him one day. So when it finally happened, it seemed... you know, when you're real young, it's not as easy to be intimidated sometimes."

"You think that things are real natural," he said. "You miss the biggest part of it doesn't click that this is a big thing when you're that young. So I just took it basically in stride. It's only three or four years later that I've come to realize how important it was, and what those years have meant to the rest of my life."
